“This Institution Is a Good One”: The Female Relief Society of Nauvoo, 17 March 1842 to 16 March 1844

Maurine Carr Ward

The story of Relief Society began as an idea in the parlor of Sarah Melissa Kimball between Sarah and her seamstress, Margaret Cook. It became a possibility as Sarah and Margaret gathered their friends and neighbors to Sarah's home and planned for a women's organization. It became a reality when Joseph Smith invited these sisters to the upper floor of his red brick store and formally organized The Female Relief Society of Nauvoo. Twenty women were voted into membership at that historic meeting. It became energized when these women, and the hundreds who followed during the next two years, realized that the word “relief” was an action word, not a passive one.

“It is natural for females to have feelings of charity,” the Prophet Joseph Smith instructed. “You are now plac'd in a situation where you can act according to those sympathies which God has planted in your bosoms.”¹

Following that admonition, orphans and widows with large families were cared for. The sick were taken into homes and nursed. Women donated apples, flour, meat, coffee, milk, sugar, rolls, cornmeal, and rice. Others donated cotton flannel, coarse linen for pantaloons, thread, and flax for spinning, while those who had no means to give used their talents to sew, spin, and weave. Still others donated quilts, sheets, pillow slips, tablecloths, towels, soap, and candles. Hulda Barruss gave shingles. Weekly, the sisters donated what money they could spare. Mrs. Durfee took a wagon and collected wool that could be used for clothes for the temple workers. A Sister

She is also the editor of Winter Quarters: The 1846–1848 Life Writings of Mary Haskin Parker Richards, published in 1996 by Utah State University Press. Smith proposed calling on friendly nonmember merchants for goods. The sisters even involved their menfolk, when it became necessary. When some men refused to pay Sister Hillman for work she had done, they were complained about at the Masonic Lodge. If a woman needed her yard plowed, the Relief Society sisters knew just which brother to ask for help.

Not all the women who joined the society contributed. Many of them were the beneficiaries. Cynthia Baggs was given shoes. She and Prudence Barkdull, both widows, were given money to pay for their children's schooling. One sister wept, saying she had nothing to give, and spoke of her husband's death in Missouri. Other women came to the meetings asking for work where they could be paid.

It is possible that the majority of the service was not recorded in the minutes, as women provided emotional, spiritual, and physical aid to each other. Even after the last Relief Society meeting was held in Nauvoo, on 16 March 1844, the sisters continued to serve. In the April conference of 1844, the Relief Society sisters were asked to donate one cent a week or fifty cents a year to help purchase nails and glass for the temple. Their goal was to raise a thousand dollars, which they did by the end of March 1845.² In July of 1844, women of Macedonia and LaHarpe decided to raise money to purchase an additional crane for the temple. It is not known if this was a Relief Society project, but there were many Relief Society members, perhaps even a branch Relief Society, in these settlements. In two weeks, $194 was collected for the crane.³

The Women

The Relief Society minutes list the names of 1,341 women who were voted into membership. Ten of these names are definitely duplicates. Although an additional ten to fifteen names may also be duplicates, I have chosen to use 1,331 as the total. Of this amount, I have positively identified 1,010 women. These are women who are found in various Nauvoo records and/or have birth, marriage, or death dates and/or are linked to other family members who were in Nauvoo. The remaining 321 names have (1) more than one person who fits the name, (2) scant information but need more research, or (3) no information at all.

During the second Relief Society meeting held on 24 March 1842, Mother Lucy Mack Smith stated, "This Institution is a good one—we must cherish one another, watch over one another, comfort one another and gain instruction, that we may all sit down in heaven together."

Who were the 1,010 known women who believed as Mother Smith that the institution was a good one?

Forty-four of these women were ages fifteen and younger on the date the Relief Society was organized. Two women were over seventy: Mary Nalls Younger, age seventy-five, and Hannah Kidd Drollinger, age seventy-six. In between those extremes are women ages sixteen through twenty (119), twenty-one through thirty (299), thirty-one through forty (271), forty-one through fifty (133), fifty-one through sixty (66), and sixty-one through seventy (34).⁴ Some ages are unknown.

Romance blossomed in Nauvoo as hundreds of young men and women entered the city. One hundred fifty marriages took place in Nauvoo between 1839 and 1846. Another twenty marriages were solemnized in Adams, Pike, and Hancock Counties, Illinois, and in Lee County, Iowa. It was not just the young who married. About twenty widows were married in Nauvoo during those years.⁵

On the other edge of the spectrum were deaths. Fifty-eight of the Relief Society sisters died in Nauvoo, with another thirty-five at Council Bluffs, Kanessville, and Winter Quarters. Twenty-three other women died as they crossed Iowa, Nebraska, and Wyoming. Fifty-seven of the women lost spouses in Nauvoo, not counting those men who died outside the city, such as Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

Sixteen women wrote a petition to the U.S. Congress for their suffering in Missouri. Philinda Myrick and Amanda Barnes Smith had husbands who were killed at Haun's Mill. Mahala Ann Overton and her small daughter, along with a friend, Mrs. Gates, and her nine children were forced from their home to start for Far West, on foot, in the cold weather of September and October 1838. Louisa Tanner Follett's husband was imprisoned in Liberty Jail. Betsy Bidwell refused to disclose the location of her husband. One of the mob "put his gun up to his face to take ame and swore that he would blow my brains out if I did not tell the truth they offered maney other abuses to tedious to mention.”⁶

More than half of the women in Relief Society shared the experience with another family member. This could be a mother, sister-in-law, granddaughter, or whole families. Mary Calvert Allred brought in three daughters and one daughter-in-law on the same day. Bradley and Mary Wilson had six daughters-in-law all join the same day, followed by three granddaughters later.

Some women were like Leah Childs. When she joined, she was accompanied by daughters from three marriages. An interesting family situation shows up with Joseph Smith. Besides Emma, who was the first president of the Female Relief Society of Nauvoo, twenty of his plural wives joined.

The Relief Society sisters represented several countries, although some of the women had already immigrated to the United States before they joined the Church. The countries include Canada (50), England (76), Ireland (6), Germany (1), Scotland (5), and Wales (2).

The completion of the temple was foremost in the minds of all Nauvoo Saints and had been the impetus for starting the Relief Society organization. When the principle of baptism for the dead was introduced and baptisms were begun in the Mississippi River, 452 of the Relief Society women eagerly performed work for their dead ancestors, friends, and even deceased former spouses.⁷ In December 1845 and January 1846, 673 women received their endowments.

When Brigham Young reorganized the Relief Society Organization in 1867, it was the women from the original Relief Society in Nauvoo who filled the presidencies.⁸ Salt Lake City, Beaver, Bountiful, Grantsville, Lehi, Manti, Marriott, Minersville, Oak Creek, Ogden, Richmond, Spring City, and Wallsburg in Utah had their first presidents trained in Nauvoo. Paris, Idaho, had Eliza Ann Graves Rich as the first president, and Talitha Cumi Garlick Cheney became the first president of Victor, Idaho, at the age of seventy-two.

Perhaps as many as two hundred women did not remain with the Church in Nauvoo or with Brigham Young when he went west. The families of Sidney Rigdon, William Marks, Joseph Smith Sr., and others went a different way. Sarah Schroeder Hawley and Verona Brace Jenkins followed Lyman Wight to Texas and performed proxy endowments in Wight’s temple at Zodiac.⁹

Lavina Jackson Murphy moved her family back to Tennessee after her husband’s apostasy and death. There she heard stories of the wonderful land in California and convinced her married daughter, Sarah Murphy Foster—also a member of the Nauvoo Relief Society—to join the family in a new land. Lavina and some of her children perished at Donner’s Pass, as Sarah and her husband were hiking out for help.¹⁰

Lizzy Fory was part of the young crowd in Nauvoo, and she watched many of her friends marry and head west. Lizzy moved across the river to Davenport, Iowa, to live with her brother. She joined the Congregational Church and married Levi Davis, who had “beautiful black eyes and hair . . . [and was] so kind and gentle” and was a Baptist. Only three people knew of her Mormon past—her brother, her pastor, and her husband. She wed in a dress of beautiful swiss mull, trimmed with thread lace, and wore a wreath of orange blossoms in her braided hair, with curls around her ears. She never felt that she had rejected the truth of the Latter-day Saint gospel, but “there were some things . . . that I could not believe, and could not be happy where they were carried out,” she confided to a friend.¹¹

Each woman in the Nauvoo Relief Society has a story to tell. Susanna Smith Adams accompanied her husband with the Mormon Battalion as a laundress. Alice Coupe Robinson and her family were part of the “Poor Camp” who were dumped across the river after the battle of Nauvoo. Both she and her husband died in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, in 1847. Hannah Flint Holbrook taught school for six students the fall of 1848 in a bullrush wickiup on the banks of the Jordan River. Sarah Witt Rockwood was the eleventh person to join The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Louisa Barnes Pratt accompanied her husband on a mission to Tahiti in 1850.

Methodology

I began my research of these women using the LDS Vital Records Library on CDROM, which includes Susan Easton Black’s fifty-volume Membership of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: 1830–1848 and her six-volume Early Members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I used every creative way of spelling names and conducting searches and often came up with many pages of information on each woman. Two other sources followed: the four-volume Pioneer Women of Faith and Fortitude, published by the International Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, and familysearch.org, especially the Ancestral File, created by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

None of these records are original sources, and they have combined information from several generations of descendants. Therefore, there are multiple errors and variations in dates, locations, and spellings of names. But they are easy to use and provide a starting point for research.

Next, I set out to prove that a woman found in those first sources was actually in Nauvoo or the surrounding area. Were there births or deaths or marriages in Nauvoo of family members? Did her children attend school in Nauvoo in 1842? Is her name, or that of her husband or father or son, in the 1842 Hancock County Tax Records? Was the family in the 1842 Nauvoo Census, Nauvoo List of Members showing people coming into the city after 1841, the Daily Log of Persons, beginning 31 July 1843 and ending 22 January 1846, or the Record of Members, containing the names of persons who handed in certificates to the clerk in Nauvoo? This certificate shows the place it was made out, the presiding authority who signed it, and the date it was written. Did a woman or her husband write a petition in 1839 or 1840 to Congress for redress because of persecutions in Missouri? Was she or a family member one of the 3,419 people who signed their names on the scroll petition in the fall of 1843?

I used articles in several back issues of the Nauvoo Journal: Lyman Platt compiled a list of over four hundred early branches of the Church, with hundreds of names of members. Cheryl Harmon Bean researched the early converts of Erie County, Pennsylvania, in 1831–33. Karla Gunzenhauser provided her research into the Saints who lived at Garden Grove, Iowa. Sheri Slaughter compiled an index of Mormons in St. Louis, Missouri. I researched the early Quincy Cemetery and Mormon Burials and the Nashville, Iowa Branch records. Fred Woods added the sexton's record of Nauvoo.

There are also other sources. Many wonderful biographies are available that contain information on the women in this study. I combed the Nauvoo Temple Endowment Register. Susan and Harvey Black just completed compiling all of the Baptism for the Dead records in Nauvoo, which show the proxy and the dates of the baptisms. In addition, there are many sources that have not been researched yet or that I have just begun to research.

The record that follows is the result of a three-year work in process. I welcome any corrections, additions, histories, documents, or pictures to help in my continuing research. These women deserve to be remembered. A legend of abbreviations and a bibliography follow the listing of names.

Women of the Female Relief Society of Nauvoo, the database

Bold names are the way they are found in the Relief Society minutes. They are followed by the date the woman was voted into membership, then birth information and parents, marriage information and spouse, and death information.

Underlined names show differences between listed name and correct name.

Italics show explanations and incomplete proof. Some names, which are found in the list more than once, may have positive proof on one name and incomplete proof on subsequent names.

3. Colvin, Nauvoo Temple, 25.
4. These ages are figured using the day the Relief Society was organized. Actual dates will be different, as some women did not join until 1843 and 1844.
5. Figures used for deaths, marriages, and places of birth are taken from known information. I do not have complete data on several of the women in the control group of the 1,008 positively identified women.

6. Clark V. Johnson, ed., Mormon Redress Petitions: 1833–1838 (Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University, Religious Studies Center, 1992), 420.

7. When the work of baptizing for the dead began in August of 1840, the Saints were allowed to be baptized for any of their ancestors, male or female. It was not until 1845 that Brigham Young changed the policy so that women were baptized for women and men were baptized for men.

8. This is only a small sampling of the Relief Society organizations in the western states. In the future, research is planned on Relief Society minutes of all towns in Utah and neighboring locations.
