Comments: #1
1. Margaret was a member of the General Board of the Y.L.M.I.A. She was baptized when 14 years of age, married to President John Taylor and emigrated to the Valley in 1858. She served as secretary of the Salt Lake Stake Relief Society and as counselor in the general presidency of the Y.L.M.I.A. for seven years. In 1887, on the death of her husband, she resigned from the latter position.

Margaret was born in Connecticut. When Margaret was very young, the family moved to Paterson, New Jersey; her seven brothers and sisters were born here. Eventually they moved back to Westport, Connecticut where Margaret taught school.

Apostle John Taylor was presiding over the New York Conference for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and visited the Young family often. He became attracted to Margaret. They were married on September 27, 1856. Margaret became his seventh wife; she was also his youngest. They were married at his father’s home by Elder George A. Smith.

Margaret came to Utah in 1857, probably with an Independent Wagon Company. Family history records show that she went back to Florence, Nebraska to meet her family who were on their westward trek, and came back to Utah with the Appleby & Young Company. This was the last Company to leave Nebraska for the Salt Lake Valley before Winter set in.

Upon her arrival in the Valley, she lived for a time with Leonora Cannon Taylor, President Taylor’s first wife. She held a private school where she taught all the Taylor children as well as a few neighborhood children. Margaret and John Taylor became the parents of nine children; one died in childhood. As custom dictated at the time, each child bore the maiden name of their mother as their second name. Her husband, John Taylor, was sustained as the third President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in October, 1880.

Margaret acted as first counselor to Elmina S. Taylor, who was the first President of the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association from the time of its organization on June 19, 1880. In 1887, she asked to be released so that she could care for the needs of her family following the death of her husband.

President Taylor had been in hiding for about three years to avoid arrest by Federal Agents because of his polygamous life. He passed away on July 25, 1887, at the home of a friend in Kaysville, Utah; Margaret was at his bedside.

Margaret was possessed of an innate quality of culture and refinement which influenced and impressed all who came in contact with her. She was well-read and had an extensive library stocked with many books she had brought with her from her home in the East. Her methods of control were by persuasion and kindness. Kindness was one of her chief virtues.

In later years, Margaret was troubled with a stomach ailment and spent her declining years with her daughter, Leonora. She passed away on May 3, 1919.

A beautiful tribute was paid her by Leonora Cannon Taylor, a sister wife, “Maggie has been as much to me as any daughter could be.” Margaret’s family believe the following scripture describes their mother’s life, “Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.”

Martha was born in Connecticut, a descendent of early settlers of Elba, Genesee County, New York. Little is known of her childhood.

She married Stephen Taylor before 1832, soon after the death of his second wife, Patty Barr. They became the parents of four children; two sons and two daughters.

They heard missionaries from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints preaching the true Gospel in Elba, New York. Martha and her husband were both baptized into the Church.
