William Clayton Diary, 21 November 1843, Church Archives and James B. Allen, No Tol’ Nor Labor Fear: The Story of William Clayton (Provo: Brigham Young University Press, 2002). Strangely, this ordinance was not repeated in the Nauvoo Temple. It became an established sealing practice at Nauvoo, presumably before the death of the Prophet, that a female could not be sealed to her deceased husband for "time and eternity" without also being sealed "for time" to a living spouse (even if the spouse was non-mormon). However, there is no evidence that Margaret Major Lawrence Bickford was sealed "for time" to her civil husband Josiah Bickford (or to any other person) on this occasion.
