Brian, don't say that I never gave you anything, Robert.

"Ordination of Brother Margarito Bautista to the office of Apostle and Patriarch, under the hands of Rulon C. Allred and confirmed by Joseph W. Musser which delegated all of the authority which he possessed.

"By Rulon C. Allred June 22, 1951.

"Brother Margarito Bautista: In the name of Jesus Christ and by the authority of the Holy Priesthood, and by the authority which we hold; we, your brothers, place our hands on your head and we ordain you an Apostle of the Lord Jesus and a Patriarch, and we confirm on you all the authority of the Holy Priesthood which we, ourselves, possess. This we do, so that you may glorify God and for no mean or impure reasons; because if you use this power and authority unrighteously, it will turn to your condemnation by virtue of your Holy Priesthood.

"You are over the Latin American people to continue the fullness of the gospel and the ordinances among them, without having to depend on any other man; these blessings we confer upon you in the name of Our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

"Ratification of the ordination to the Apostleship by President Joseph W. Musser.

"Dear Brother Bautista: As a man who holds the keys of the Holy Apostolic Order over the people I confirm on your head the blessings which you have received from brother Allred, and seal on you all the authority which I myself possess. You are an apostle of the Lord Jesus and a Patriarch, and we give these blessings to you in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen."

"California Paper Highlights Montana Fundamentalists
The practice of polygamy continues to be a curiosity and a fascination even in pluralistic America. In a front page article of the San Jose Mercury News Sunday edition, October 9, 1983, staff writer Kathy Holub explores the lifestyle and views of a Montana community of fundamentalist Mormons.
REVIEW 3:11-12/16 (Nov 83)NEWS
Pinesdale is located in the Bitterroot Mountains of western Montana and is currently inhabited by approximately 600 persons. The interviews mostly consisted of two families—the Koerners and the Biers. Holub describes Bill Koerner as "a 54-year-old patriarch with a craggy face, slick-back silver hair, a black vest and cowboy boots" who sits enthroned by six of his seven wives.
REVIEW 3:11-12/16 (Nov 83)NEWS
Koerner explains his philosophy of plural marriage: to help someone else reach an ultimate spiritual state. "You give as much security and as much happiness as you can," he says, "by accepting the responsibility to provide responsibly for your wives and by placing their eternal lives in your hands." His first rule of polygamy, says Holub, is "that it is not for everyone. He believes it requires maturity, unselfishness and fairness." Irma Koerner, the first wife, explains the process by which a second wife is married "following what is called 'the Law of Sarah' based on the Old Testament story in which the childless Sarah has her husband Abraham take a second wife, Hagar . . ." The problem of jealousy, says Koerner, is both a temporary and everpresent issue that is deeply complex.
REVIEW 3:11-12/16 (Nov 83)NEWS
Holub quotes Joanne Bierer, a 34-year-old mother of six who recently married into the community. Bierer gives what Holub tags "the stock rationale" for plural marriage among women involved. "You have more freedom if you have help with the cooking, the cleaning and taking care of the kids... A sister-wife I think would be fantastic." Her husband, Ron, extols the sacrifices of wives this way: "A man doesn't love his first wife any less when he takes a second wife. He loves her more for letting him have the second wife. What could be more beautiful than giving your husband another wife?"
REVIEW 3:11-12/17 (Nov 83)NEWS
There are really two Pinesdales, says Holub. The "real Pinesdale" was established twenty years ago by Rulon Allred as a refuge from the persecution the group was experiencing in Utah. When Allred was killed, his brother, Owen, assumed the role of "chief leader." Pinesdale is said to be the "oldest and most successful" of all the Allred outposts; its one thousand acres of land are owned by the community's spiritual leaders in Salt Lake City. Marvin Jessop, Holub says, is now the man with the clout. Unidentified visitors are asked, "Does Marvin know you are here?" when they chance to enter the town's one paved country road, some five miles off the highway.
REVIEW 3:11-12/17 (Nov 83)NEWS
The "official Pinesdale" was formed and incorporated last year "for the outside world" as a buffer to the attempted persecution of the residents. As a sort of nineteenth century small town with its accompanying under-educated, humbling bureaucracy mentality, this Pinesdale does not impress one as either too efficient or concerned with protocol. With "no budget, no accountant, no lawyer and practically no money," its "jovial" mayor, Loran Herbert, sits in an office (marked "OFFICE" in crayon), seemingly without a care. "But Herbert can afford such a relaxed attitude because the town's real business is conducted elsewhere," says Holub.
REVIEW 3:11-12/17 (Nov 83)NEWS
The business of the town appears to be self-sufficiency. With their own dairy, cabinet shop, hardware store and a 200-kilowat power generator, the town epitomizes the Mormon custom of stockpiling two years' worth of food as preparation against the chaos and collapse of the American government which the people expect at any moment and as freedom from any government involvement.
REVIEW 3:11-12/17 (Nov 83)NEWS
Nearby LDS leaders (all the polygamists have been excommunicated from the Mormon church) believe that the people of Pinesdale are 'good people' but fear that some young women have been pressured into plural marriages against their will. "Koerner emphatically denies the charges of coercion, but he insists just as strongly that polygamy should never be made legal."
REVIEW 3:11-12/17 (Nov 83)NEWS
Says he, "If the Supreme Court ever dropped the laws against plural marriage, every rowdy in the world would go out and get himself a few wives, and it would take all the purity and holiness out of it. It would be an abomination. I'd hate to see it."
